Accreditation is the process by which formal recognition of competence is given to qualified organizations, known as Certification Bodies (CBs). Accreditation demonstrates the organization's impartiality, competence and performance capability. Smart accredits CBs, authorizing them to audit and issue certificates of compliance with Smart's Certification Standards. Smart accredits and monitors CBs, to provide assurance that the public can rely on the competence of accredited organizations, the certificates they issue, and the process by which they are issued.
